OUR STRENGTHS... as heard through community engagement efforts

- + Community connected through volunteerism, events, and regular engagement
- + Plentiful green space and recreation opportunities
- + Conveniently located to regional assets
- + Many strong nonprofit organizations supporting the community and its residents
- + Affordable quality of life
- + Increasing diversity of population

OUR CHALLENGES...
what's holding us back?

- Additional youth engagement in community activities and volunteerism is needed
- Need affordable housing options for families, particularly seniors
- Lacking conversations about diversity
- Communication of available resources is inadequate
- School system falling behind neighbors and needs better support for families with special needs

OUR ASPIRATIONS...

a vision for our community

- > Increase the number of places and activities for youth throughout the community
- > Improve public transportation and accessibility
- > Create thriving small business climate that provides amenities and jobs for residents
- > Support community activities that drive collaboration and engagement with one another
- > Connect families and residents with needs to services that provide support
- > Establish an identity and market the community to younger families and residents
- > Improve the quality of education and the Bethel Park school system

HOW LIBRARIES CAN HELP...

community engagement is critical

As civic institutions, libraries are neutral, safe spaces where all are welcome and respected.

Libraries are no longer just transactional institutions for borrowing materials. They are transformational spaces for the discovery of new ideas and passions. Libraries are human connectors providing opportunities to engage with others, including those who represent diverse perspectives and cultures.

Gone are the intimidating spaces where librarians “shush” anyone talking above a whisper. Today’s thriving libraries are welcoming and vibrant.

Libraries level the playing field, providing computers and wifi for those without access and working patiently with those who struggle to navigate the digital environment.

In an age when the internet seemingly puts the world at everyone’s fingertips, library professionals help people find the right information.

Libraries are community conveners, offering meeting space for civic engagement, and welcoming community partners for collaboration on programs and services for all ages.

WHAT’S NEXT?

If you haven’t already done so, get to know your local library! The more libraries understand their communities, the better they can serve them. The next time people gather to discuss community challenges and aspirations, remember that the library should have a seat at the table. Please reach out to the library at any time. We are here to support you.
